Biden's COP27 Remarks Affirm Achieving Beyond 50 is in Sight with Continued and Enhanced All-of-Society Climate Policy

President Biden's package of climate actions announced at COP27 UN climate talks today demonstrates needed leadership on tackling the climate crisis both in the United States and around the world. These announcements not only increase confidence that the United States is stepping up to deliver on its own climate commitments, particularly through new, stronger methane policies, but also that the U.S. will be a stronger partner in helping other vulnerable nations to adapt and transition to climate safe and clean-energy powered futures.

America Is All In's latest "Beyond 50" analysis, released this week, called for strengthened oil and gas methane regulations among other key federal actions which match with the suite of policies announced by the US Government today. These expanded executive actions, plus the results of the US midterms, means that with sustained, strengthened, and supercharged non-federal action, the US is further on track to deliver beyond 50% cuts in its emissions by 2030.

America Is All In coalition members from across American states, tribes, cities, businesses, universities, and institutions of health, culture, and faith are ready to partner with the Biden Administration and the federal and state governments newly elected to office to implement the climate policies and resources unleashed in these announcements, as well as the investments in landmark climate legislation passed within the last year.

America Is All In welcomes the recognition that every sector of society has a role to play in solving the climate crisis, and a trio of initiatives announced today will help resource and mobilize marginalized communities and strengthen the power of some of the staunchest climate champions across our society: the Climate Gender Equity Fund, an Indigenous Peoples Finance Access Facility, and new exchanges to empower youth across the world to be leaders on resilience and clean energy in their communities.

We applaud the US administration's embrace of an all-in approach in confronting and beating back the climate crisis throughout this decisive decade for climate action.

AMERICA IS ALL IN is the most expansive coalition of leaders ever assembled in support of climate action in the United States. Mobilizing thousands of U.S. cities, states, tribal nations, businesses, schools, and faith, health, and cultural institutions, the coalition is working alongside the federal government to develop a national climate strategy that meets the urgency of the climate crisis, scaling climate action around the country to empower workers and communities, and promoting the leadership of non-federal actors on the world stage.

Led by Mike Bloomberg, the UN Secretary-General's Special Envoy for Climate Ambition and Solutions, Washington Governor Jay Inslee, Charlotte Mayor Vi Lyles, and climate champions across the country, the coalition is working to cut U.S. emissions in half by 2030 (from 2005 levels) and reach net zero emissions by 2050, while guarding against the impacts of climate disruption. Coupled with whole-of-government action on climate, America Is All In champions a whole-of-society mobilization to deliver the transformational change that science demands, with the goal of a healthy, prosperous, equitable, and sustainable future.
